Keep personal information private—
Annual Notice of Information Practices

This notice applies to Aetna's disability and life insurance plans. It contains important information about Aetna's Privacy Practices.

We protect your privacy

We consider personal information to be private. Our policies protect your personal information from unlawful use. By "personal information," we mean:

- Information about your physical or mental health
- Information about the health care you receive
- Information about what your health care costs

Personal information does not include what is available to the public. For example, anyone can access information about what the plan covers. It also does not include reports that do not identify you.

Summary of the Aetna Privacy Policy

When necessary for your care or treatment, the operation of our health plans, or other related activities, we use personal information within our company, share it with our affiliates, and may disclose it to:

- Your doctors, dentists, pharmacies, hospitals and other caregivers
- Other insurers
- Vendors
- Government authorities
- Third party administrators

These parties are required to keep your information private as required by law.

Some of the ways in which we may use your information include:

- Paying claims
- Making decisions about what the plan covers
- Coordination of payments with other insurers
- Quality assessment
- Activities to improve our plans
- Audits

We consider these activities key for the operation of our plans. If allowed by law, we usually will not ask if it's okay to use your information. However, we will ask for your permission to use your information for marketing purposes. We have policies in place if you are unable to give us permission to use your information. We are required to give you access to your information. You may also request corrections to your personal information. We must fulfill your request within a reasonable amount of time.
