Second Water Quality Task Force listening session is Saturday

The Water Quality Task Force is inviting Milwaukee citizens to attend its second special Saturday public community listening session regarding the health impacts of lead in water service lines, as well as the findings and recommendations of the Task Force.

Task Force Chair Alderman Jim Bohl said the second special session will take place this Saturday, April 8 at Bradley Tech High School at 9 a.m. “Our first special Saturday session (held April 1) at North Division High School went very well and included some great discussion and excellent questions from citizens,” he said. “We view the Saturday sessions as being more accessible to more people, and I’m looking forward to seeing a good crowd at Bradley Tech on Saturday.”

The task force report of (working) draft recommendations can be viewed online at milwaukee.gov/WQTFrecommend.

The Water Quality Task Force has been meeting regularly since September 2016, investigating ways to make sure the city’s drinking water is safe from lead in old water line pipes and lateral service lines. The task force will draft recommendations on steps and methods to ensure the long-term health and safety of Milwaukee’s drinking water.
