Milwaukee Urban League opens new Workforce Technology Center

The new Workforce Technology Center located inside the Milwaukee Urban League offers individuals the opportunity to learn valuable STEM (science, technology, engineering and math) skills that can lead to rewarding career opportunities.

The new center – inside the Milwaukee Urban League building at 435 W. North Ave. – showcases technology, new computers and a welcoming learning environment, said Alderman Milele A. Coggs.

“Milwaukee is home to many companies and businesses that rely on workers who possess critical STEM skills and the Workforce Technology Center will be a tremendous resource to help ready individuals who will fill those critical jobs in the future,” Alderman Coggs said.

The center was created with the generous help of Northwestern Mutual volunteers and donations of artwork and computers from NML.
