MEDIA ADVISORY

Hip-Hop Week job fair brings employment opportunities, resources to the community

The City of Milwaukee Office of Workforce Development, in conjunction with Ascension St. Joseph, will be hosting a community job fair this Thursday, August 24 as part of the Hip-Hop Week festivities. Employers from various industries including financial services, manufacturing, construction, hospitality/retail and more will be on-site to meet with prospective job seekers. Additional opportunities will also be available to connect with employers and employment service agencies to find direct hire opportunities, as well as job training, supportive services and more. The event will also feature music from DJ Nick Stokes.

Alderman Khalif J. Rainey, who hosts the Hip-Hop Week festivities, encourages community members to attend this week's job fair. "An important part of Hip-Hop Week is working to connect residents with the tools and resources to set them up for success and prosperity," he said. "This job fair will be an amazing opportunity to make connections with companies offering family-supporting jobs, and I hope to see the community turn out and take advantage of all this job fair has to offer."
